

ABSTRACT

Conductive ink compositions which can be cured to highly conductive metal traces by means of “chemical welding” include additives which reduce the curing temperatures for use with low-temperature substrates. Conductive ink compositions can be deposited on a substrate coated with a cure temperature reducing agent to reduce the curing temperatures.